

GEOL 204 Project: Pachycormidae (Pachycormiformes)

By Nimrod Ravin, Rohon Duggal, Alex Blackburn, Jared Bates

Bibliography:

Cooper, S.L.A. and Maxwell, E.E. (2022), Revision of the pachycormid fish Saurostomus esocinus Agassiz from the Early Jurassic (Toarcian) of Europe, with new insight into the origins of suspension-feeding in Pachycormidae. Pap Palaeontol, 8: e1467.

<https://doi.org/10.1002/spp2.1467>

Dietl, G. & Schweigert, Guenter & Franz, Matthias & Geyer, Matthias. (1998). Profile des Nusplinger Plattenkalks (Oberjura, Schwäbische Alb). Stuttgarter Beiträge zur Naturkunde Serie B. 265. 1-37.

Wretman, L., Blom, H., & Kear, B. P. (2016). Resolution of the Early Jurassic actinopterygian fish Pachycormus and a dispersal hypothesis for Pachycormiformes. Journal of Vertebrate Paleontology, 36(5).<https://doi.org/10.1080/02724634.2016.1206022>

Friedman M. (2012). Parallel evolutionary trajectories underlie the origin of giant suspension-feeding whales and bony fishes. Proceedings. Biological sciences, 279(1730), 944–951. <https://doi.org/10.1098/rspb.2011.1381>

Cooper, S.L.A.; Giles, S.; Young, H.; Maxwell, E.E. A New Large †Pachycormiform (Teleostei: †Pachycormiformes) from the Lower Jurassic of Germany, with Affinities to the Suspension-Feeding Clade, and Comments on the Gastrointestinal Anatomy of Pachycormid Fishes. Diversity 2022, 14, 1026. <https://doi.org/10.3390/d14121026>

Vickers, M., & Shephard, G. (2022, May 11). Changing climates and shifting currents in Jurassic Oceans. The Centre for Earth Evolution and Dynamics.

<https://www.mn.uio.no/ceed/english/about/blog/2022/climates-currents-jurassic.html>

Erin E. Maxwell, Paul H. Lambers, Adriana López-Arbarello, and Günter Schweigert,
Acta Palaeontologica Polonica 65 (3), 2020: 429-453 doi:<https://doi.org/10.4202/app.00749.2020>